

The Gettysburg Battle-Field--An Old Indian Fight Waged on the Field.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer, Aug 7.

An archeological investigation of the country around Gettysburg, conducted by a learned antiquarian, has proved the truth of a belief long entertained by residents, that the battle-field of Gettysburg had, in the distant past, been the scene of a bloody struggle between the Indians or of some unknown and long extinct race.

This fact is attested by the exhumation of the military implements of the combatants and the remains of the dead in what is known as the Indian Field, about a mile southwest of Round Top and of the National Cemetery. These relics are found thickly imbedded in the soil over the whole area of territory which was the scene of the rebel defeat in 1863. They consist of stone arrow heads, battle axes, war clubs, shields, &c. Some of them have been disinterred from their tomb of centuries and placed on exhibition in the college for the present, but they will soon be placed in a case at the Springs Hotel.
